

AAES Policy on Academic Integrity

The American Association of Endocrine Surgeons is dedicated to maintaining the highest standards of academic integrity. Abstract, manuscript, and grant submissions will require confirmation of the following statements:

I certify that:

- 1. I am the author of the material I am submitting to the AAES.
- 2. This research has been conducted with approval of the appropriate ethics board(s), institutional review board(s), or in compliance with the Declaration of Helsinki.
- 3. All authors are responsible for the quality, accuracy, and ethics of this work.
- 4. This is original work that has never been published.

The AAES reserves the right to sanction individuals who respond falsely to the above, or who are found to have committed academic misconduct including but not limited to plagiarism, double-publishing, or performing research without proper institutional review and oversight. In cases of academic misconduct, upon the discretion of the AAES Executive Council, the AAES may prohibit individuals from submitting abstracts to the annual meeting for up to 3 years, or may issue other sanctions including but not limited to barring or revoking membership in the society.
